The forces and institutions that shape the modern world can only be understood if they are studied from more than one perspective, using more than one set of tools. Our new PPE major* allows students to do just that, offering broad and rigorous training in the foundations of Philosophy, Politics and Economics with a critical perspective on the concepts and institutions that they study.

Students engaged in discussion during class at Ohio State. The PPE major at Ohio State combines the foundations of philosophy, politics and economics to provide an interdisciplinary perspective that prepares students for a wide range of careers.
